Princeton University

Princeton's main campus covers 500 acres, and its more than 160 buildings exemplify a wealth of architectural styles, ranging from colonial buildings to collegiate Gothic dormitories to modern structures by eminent architects.

Coeducational since 1969 (women comprise about 45% of an average freshman class), Princeton enrolls approximately 6,400 students (4,600 undergraduates/1,800 graduate students). Coming from all 50 states and from more than 70 foreign countries, Princeton students are an unusually talented and diverse group that represents many economic, ethnic, social, cultural and religious backgrounds. Minority students usually make up 25-30% of freshman classes.

Students are apt to choose Princeton for the strength of its academic program, its relatively small size combined with the resources of a major research university and the personal attention its undergraduates enjoy. Men and women who seek a quality education in the liberal arts, architecture, engineering or public and international affairs will discover that Princeton has much to offer.

Princeton offers an abundance of extraordinary resources, including a library system that holds almost five million books and almost 35,000 current journals and periodicals—nearly all on accessible open-stack shelving; an art museum that exhibits works from its own and other outstanding collections, complementing courses in art and archaeology; a natural history museum; a computing center and clusters of microcomputers throughout the campus; and outstanding recreational and athletic facilities.

Beyond the University's historic campus is the town of Princeton, a community of 30,000 people and the home of the Institute for Advanced Study (where Albert Einstein spent the last 22 years of his life), Princeton Theological Seminary and Westminster Choir College of Rider.

Princeton sits halfway between New York and Philadelphia (approximately 50 miles from each) and is easily accessible by car, bus or train.

Degrees

Princeton offers two undergraduate degrees: the bachelor of arts (A.B.) degree and the bachelor of science in engineering (B.S.E.) degree. Within these degree programs, students can choose from among 1,300 courses offered by 34 departments and numerous certificate programs. Students may participate in one or more interdisciplinary programs in addition to concentrating in a department. Students may also apply for an independent concentration outside existing programs. Undergraduates are admitted to the

Holder Tower

University and not to a particular department or interdepartmental program and have until the second term of their sophomore year to choose a departmental major.

Bachelor of Arts

Undergraduates in the A.B. program must successfully complete one or two courses, as indicated, in the following seven distribution areas: epistemology and cognition (1), ethical thought and moral values (1), historical analysis (1), literature and the arts (2), quantitative reasoning (1), social analysis (2), and science and technology-with laboratory (2). They also meet a one-term writing requirement and demonstrate proficiency in a foreign language.

Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors usually enroll in four courses during each of the two terms of the academic year; seniors usually carry three courses each term. With the exception of students who receive advanced standing, all A.B. students must successfully complete a minimum of 30 courses in eight terms of study. Departmental requirements combine upper-level courses with independent work in both the junior and senior years. A senior thesis is required of all A.B. candidates.

Bachelor of Science in Engineering

B.S.E. students enroll in four courses for the first term of the freshman year and four or five courses each succeeding term, following a sequence appropriate to their individual programs. The school requirement for the B.S.E. degree is at least 36 courses in the four years of study.

B.S.E. students must complete a minimum of seven courses in the humanities and social sciences. B.S.E. students are required to take one course in four of the following six areas: epistemology and cognition, ethical thought and moral values, foreign language, historical analysis, literature and the arts, and social analysis. The remaining three required courses and additional courses may be taken in any fields in the social sciences and humanities. The ability to write English clearly and precisely is a University requirement that must be satisfied by completing a one-semester course that fulfills the writing requirement.

The Honor Code

Examinations at Princeton are not proctored by faculty members. At the end of each exam, students sign a pledge indicating that they have abided by the principles of the honor code, which was first adopted by undergraduates at Princeton in 1893.

Independent Work

Independent work is an essential part of a Princeton education; it is required for all students in the A.B. program and for many in the B.S.E. program. Juniors, in consultation with faculty advisers, research and write one or more long papers; seniors undertake thesis projects that may be research papers or something more innovative, such as a musical composition, a collection of poems, a scientific experiment, a group of paintings or the production of a play.

Campus and Residential Life

Princeton undergraduates live on campus, and campus housing is guaranteed for the full four years. All freshmen and sophomores at Princeton live and dine in five residential colleges: Butler, Forbes, Mathey, Rockefeller and Wilson. Each college consists of a cluster of dormitories (housing between 450 and 500 students) and has its own dining rooms, lounges, seminar and study rooms, computing facilities, game and television rooms and, in some cases, theaters and other spaces for the creative and performing arts. The colleges sponsor programs and special events, including intramural athletics, trips, dances, lectures and films.

A senior faculty member serves as master of each college. Each also has a staff that includes a dean, a director of studies responsible for academic advising, a college administrator, two assistant masters, a resident faculty member, faculty fellows, about a dozen juniors and seniors who serve as resident advisers and three juniors and seniors who serve as minority affairs advisers.

Approximately 75% of juniors and seniors take their meals at one of 12 historic, coeducational eating clubs, which also offer social, athletic and recreational programs. Other juniors and seniors cook their own meals in dormitory kitchens or off-campus apartments, dine in the residential colleges or join Stevenson Hall, a dining and social facility that, like the residential colleges, has a staff and faculty fellows and plans social and cultural activities.

Computing and Information Technology

Princeton students are given access to a varied and powerful computing environment supported by the Office of Computing and Information Technology (OIT). The cornerstone of student computing is Dormnet, a fiber-optic-based network that brings a high-speed data connection into every undergraduate dorm room on campus. In the last academic year, 95% of first-year students took advantage of this subscription-based connection to campus and Internet resources, with computers purchased through Princeton or brought from home.

In addition to accessing computing resources from their rooms, students can use any of more than 300 workstations and numerous high-quality printers in the two dozen OIT-supported computing clusters around campus. The campus clusters contain a mix of Windows-based Intel computers, Unix workstations, and Apple Macintoshes. Software on cluster computers includes basic productivity tools such as word processors, information access tools used to explore the World Wide Web and the Internet, special software needed for the many classes in which computing is integral to learning, and sophisticated programs for use in research.

Each student is given a NetID, an identifier that enables the use of e-mail as well as allowing access to powerful Unix computer servers (currently four Sun Ultra 2 servers and three Silicon Graphics Origin 200 systems) and to the large-scale IBM mainframe computer on campus (an IBM 9672-RC 4 system running VM/CMS and MVS). Students also have access to specialized resources and online library systems. All of these resources are available over the campus network. Princeton is fully connected to the Internet with multiple high-speed services allowing students to take full advantage of the wide range of resources, such as the World Wide Web, made available through this global network.

Additional OIT services include computer-based training and support in the use of selected software packages, maintenance of the University language resource center and video library, and support for instructional technologies in classrooms and over the campus network. Beginning in 1999 a set of specialized clusters around campus provides students with access to very high bandwidth resources for use in language and other courses.

OIT provides a number of information access servers, including World Wide Web and Usenet News servers. Students can have their own Web pages delivered to the Internet via high-speed OIT-supported servers. A CGI server allows students to write programs that can be accessed and executed over the World Wide Web.

Foreign language and educational programming and selected cable TV channels are broadcast over the campus network to dorm rooms on a subscription basis, public viewing rooms, classrooms, and the language lab.

Seniors' Plans

Each spring the Office of Career Services asks the senior class about their plans. According to a recent survey, roughly 46% of the Class of 2004 planned to go to work right away—almost 36% had accepted job offers; 5% were expecting offers; and 5% were considering offers. Nearly 31% of the class planned to continue their education immediately after graduation: 22% had accepted admission offers to graduate or professional schools; 9% were still choosing a school or seeking admission. Of those planning to continue their education, 11% had decided to pursue studies in the arts and sciences; 8% in medicine; 5% in law; 4% in engineering; and 2% in divinity, business, architecture, or other professions.

Alumni

As of August 2004, there were 78,549 living Princeton alumni (57,088 undergraduates and 21,461 Graduate School, including 14,050 women). Princeton graduates live in all 50 states and more than 115 foreign countries. In a typical year some 6,000 to 8,000 volunteers work for Princeton in class and regional association activities, fund raising, programs in the local schools, a job placement network and internship program and community service—many in advisory and leadership roles, some as members of Princeton's Board of Trustees. Today there are 130 Princeton alumni clubs and organizations throughout the world.

Firestone Library

The Alumni Association, to which all alumni belong, was established in 1826. It meets twice each year: Alumni Day in February and Reunions in June.

The Town of Princeton

Beyond Princeton University are the communities of Princeton Borough and Princeton Township, with a combined population of 30,000 people. Princeton's earliest inhabitants were Quakers, encouraged by William Penn to settle the area he had purchased in 1693.

A short walk around Princeton reveals streets named for these first families — FitzRandolph, Olden, Stockton. The Historical Society of Princeton, located in the colonial Bainbridge House, two blocks from the University's main gate, offers information on the town's early years. Princeton conscientiously preserves many of its historically and architecturally important buildings, making the town an unofficial museum of American architecture from colonial times to the present.

Within this historic setting, institutions and individuals, including many writers, artists, scientists and business executives, create an intellectual and cultural climate of unusual diversity. In addition to the University, Princeton is the home of the Institute for Advanced Study (where Albert Einstein spent the last 22 years of his life), Princeton Theological Seminary, Westminster Choir College of Rider University and Educational Testing Service. Cultural activities approach the variety ordinarily found in large cities; the town supports a resident repertory theater, several orchestras, a ballet troupe, several choral groups and an opera festival.

Although the Princeton community is small and suburban, it is far from isolated. Besides being easily accessible to both New York City and Philadelphia, Princeton also frequently plays host to traveling art shows, dance and musical groups and solo performers by virtue of its convenient location along the Boston/Washington, D.C., corridor.

Princeton University Timeline

1746 – Princeton University is chartered as the College of New Jersey in Newark. The fourth university in the colonies, it is the first to guarantee equal access to any person regardless of religion.

1756 – The College of New Jersey is moved from Newark to Princeton and housed entirely in Nassau Hall.

1776 – Benjamin Rush, Class of 1760, Richard Stockton, Class of 1748, and University President John Witherspoon sign the Declaration of Independence.

1777 – George Washington leads the Continental Army to victory at the Battle of Princeton. Nassau Hall survives despite being ravaged by the British.

1783 – After the colonies gain independence, Nassau Hall serves as the home of the Continental Congress.

1809 – James Madison, Class of 1771, is inaugurated as the fourth president of the United States.

1826 – The Alumni Association of Nassau Hall is organized with James Madison as president.

1861 – On the eve of the Civil War, the University honorably excuses 56 Southern students.

1867 – A University team wears orange and black for the first time as the baseball team takes on Yale.

1877 – Witherspoon Hall, the first dormitory in the United States with indoor plumbing, opens.

1879 – The thesis by James F. Williamson, Class of 1877, is submitted for the University's first earned Ph.D.

1893 – Acting on students' recommendation, the faculty adopts the honor system.

1896 – The trustees change the name from the College of New Jersey to Princeton University.

1912 – Woodrow Wilson, Class of 1879, is elected the 28th United States president.

1947 – The University celebrates its bicentennial as President Truman leads an academic procession of 1,000.

1968 – Plans to install an IBM System 360/91 computer at Princeton are revealed. It is 50 times slower than a 2004 PC.

1969 – By a vote of 24-8 the trustees approve undergraduate coeducation. In September 1971 women begin the school year.

1969 – Pete Conrad, Class of 1953, becomes the third man to walk on the moon. He plants a Princeton flag on the surface.

1996 – Princeton celebrates its 250th anniversary.

2001 – Shirley Tilghman becomes Princeton's first female president.

Shirley Tilghman University President

Shirley M. Tilghman, the nineteenth president of Princeton University, assumed office on June 15, 2001. She was appointed to the faculty of Princeton's Department of Molecular Biology in 1986 as the Howard A. Prior Professor of the Life Sciences. Two years later, she was named an investigator of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute. She chaired the University's Council on Science and Technology from 1993-2000, and served from 1998 to 2003 as founding director of Princeton's multi-disciplinary Lewis-Sigler Institute for Integrative Genomics. In 1996 she received one of the University's President's Award for Distinguished Teaching

President Tilghman, a native of Canada, received her Honors B.Sc. in chemistry from Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, in 1968. After two years of secondary school teaching in Sierra Leone, West Africa, she obtained her Ph.D. in biochemistry from Temple University. She did postdoctoral studies at the National Institutes of Health, participating in cloning the first mammalian gene, and has served as an independent investigator at the Institute for Cancer Research in Philadelphia and an adjunct associate professor of human genetics and biochemistry and biophysics at the University of Pennsylvania.

A member of the National Research Council's committee that set the blueprint for the United States effort in the Human Genome Project, she also was one of the founding members of the National Advisory Council of the Human Genome Project Initiative for the National Institutes of Health. She has played a national leadership role on behalf of women in science and has promoted efforts to make the early careers of young scientists as meaningful and productive as possible.

President Tilghman is a member of the American Philosophical Society, the National Academy of Sciences, the Institute of Medicine, and the Royal Society of London. She has served as a trustee of the Jackson Laboratory, a mammalian genetics institute, Rockefeller University, and Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory. She has also been a member of the Advisory Council to the director of the National Institutes of Health and the Scientific Advisory Board of the Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Sciences at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. President Tilghman has two children, one of whom, Rebecca, graduated from Princeton in the Class of 2003.

Gary D. Walters Athletic Director

Gary D. Walters, a 1967 graduate of Princeton University and point guard on Princeton's 1965 NCAA Final Four men's basketball team, was named Director of Athletics in June 1994.

Walters, a member of the Division I men's basketball committee, has led an athletic department that has won the Ivy League's unofficial all-sports standings every year and has won 117 Ivy League championships, 51 more than the second-best Ivy school since he became AD.

Princeton teams have also won 21 national championships in his first 10 years as director of athletics. During that time Princeton has fielded 33 teams in Ivy League sports, and 30 of those have won at least one championship. In addition, 35 of the 38 Princeton varsity teams have played in postseason championship competition.

Princeton has also finished in the Top 25 in the Directors' Cup in 1996, 1998, 2001 and 2002, making Princeton the only non-scholarship school ever to do so. Princeton, the highest-finishing non-scholarship school every year but one in the history of the Directors' Cup, finished 33rd in 2003-04.

Walters' dynamic leadership of the athletic department has been acclaimed and nationally profiled in such journals as Sports Illustrated, Sports Business Journal, Athletic Management, The New York Times Magazine, Wall Street Journal and Athletic Business Magazine.

In addition to this on-field success, Walters has overseen a dramatic renovation of athletic facilities, most notably the demolition of Palmer Stadium and the building of Princeton Stadium and Weaver Track and Field Stadium in its place. Other projects have included the construction of the Class of 1952 Stadium, the new squash courts in Jadwin Gym, the addition of 16 locker rooms to the Caldwell Field House and the renovation and expansion of the boathouse to the Shea Rowing Center.

Walters has also adopted a management philosophy based on the ideals of values-based coaching and the true student-athlete on campus. Toward that end, he created the Princeton Academic Athletic Fellows program, which links academic, athletic and social pursuits by identifying faculty members and administrators to serve in support roles for each team. Walters has also created the Princeton Varsity Club, a unique support group geared toward providing broad-based assistance for the Tigers, 38 intercollegiate teams.

Walters has spearheaded and implemented a gender-neutral compensation structure for coaches and undertaken management responsibilities for the University's Office of Athletic Communications and Athletic Development Office. Among his other projects have been the planning and organization of the 1996-97 Faculty Symposiums on Athletics and the development of the Student-Athlete Advisory Committee to better integrate athletics into the University community.

He has also seen three of his senior associate directors of athletics go on to become Directors of Athletics, most recently Jim Fiore at Stony Brook in 2003.

Walters has served as the chairman of the Ivy Committee on Administration and is an ethics fellow for the Institute of International Sport. He was recently named to the advisory board for the Center for the Study of Sport in Society at Northeastern.

A three-time letterwinner as a point guard on Princeton's basketball team, Walters became the youngest head basketball coach in NCAA history in 1970, when he took over the duties at Middlebury College. He then spent three years as head coach at Union College (where he coached former Tiger head basketball coach Bill Carmody) before returning to Princeton as an assistant coach in 1973. Walters also served as head coach at both Dartmouth College and Providence College and in 1980 was selected to coach at the U.S. Olympic Trials. He also served as a color analyst on Big East men's basketball telecasts.

He joined Kidder, Peabody & Co. in 1981 as an investment representative. He left as a senior vice president in 1990 to become senior partner of Woolf Associates Sports Management in Boston, and he then became managing director of Seaward Management, an investment advisory firm, in 1992. He was a three-year participant in the executive education program sponsored by the Securities Industry Association conducted at the Wharton School of Business. While at Kidder he served for three years, one as chair, on the New England NASD district business conduct committee, the regulatory body responsible for enforcing security regulations in over-the-counter markets.

Walters, who played high school basketball at Reading (Pa.) High under longtime Princeton coach Pete Carril, helped Princeton to two Ivy League titles and the 1965 NCAA Final Four. He appeared on the cover of Sports Illustrated in February 1967, was a first-team All-Ivy League selection and received the team's B.F. Bunn Trophy.

Walters and his wife, Susan, have three children: Liza (23), Nick (21) and Matt (15). Liza graduated from Brown in 2003, while Nick is a senior at Princeton.

Janet Smith Dickerson Vice President for Campus Life

Janet Smith Dickerson, vice president for campus life at Princeton University, has oversight responsibility for undergraduate campus life, including the Office of Religious Life, the Department of Athletics, Princeton University Health Services, and the Office of the Dean of Undergraduate Students (which is responsible for matters relating to the conduct and discipline of undergraduates, as well as extracurricular activities), Frist Campus Center, and the Center for Community Service. Vice President Dickerson works closely with the dean of the college in matters related to the residential colleges and with the dean of the graduate school on specific issues of concern to graduate students. She is a member of the President's Cabinet and serves as secretary for the Student Life, Health and Athletics Committee of the Board of Trustees; has policy responsibility for the housing and dining programs as they affect undergraduates; represents Princeton in the Policy Committee of the Ivy League; and chairs the Undergraduate Life Committee and Safety Committee. She also is a member of the Committee on Examinations and Standings and the Council of Masters.

Before coming to Princeton, Vice President Dickerson served as vice president for student affairs at Duke University for nine years. She was dean of the college at Swarthmore College from 1981-1991, and associate dean and director of Academic Support Programs from 1976-1981. She was the founding director of the Supportive Services program at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, where she also was an associate dean of students and assistant professor of education from 1971-1976.

Vice President Dickerson received a B.A. in English from the Western College for Women in Oxford, Ohio (now Miami University), and an M.Ed. from Xavier University in Cincinnati. She did advanced graduate study in counseling psychology at the University of Pennsylvania and received honorary degrees from Xavier and Swarthmore. She has traveled and studied in the Middle East and was a Fulbright administrative fellow to Germany in 1997.

She currently serves on the Board of Trustees of the Princeton-Blairstown Center and McCarter Theatre and is an honorary member of the Class of 1965.

She is married and has three daughters.

Richard Williams Faculty Athletics Representative

Richard Williams, the University's faculty athletics representative, is in his 31st year of service in the Office of the Dean of the College. Williams was the 2002 recipient of the Bressler Award, which honors "a member of the Princeton family who ... best embodies a belief in the lifelong lessons taught by competition and athletics as a complement to the overall educational mission."

Williams is a 1964 graduate of the United States Military Academy. He served on active duty for 10 years with assignments that included service in Vietnam with the 173rd Airborne Brigade in 1966 and as an Army ROTC instructor at the University. He holds a master's degree in history from Princeton.

His principal duties as associate dean of the college, in addition to those of the faculty athletics representative, include serving as dean of the senior class, secretary to the Committee on Examinations and Standing, responsibility for monitoring all student departures from and returns to the University, and service on a wide range of committees related to student concerns. He is an honorary member of the Classes of 1978, 1983 and 2002 and is the academic athletic fellow for the softball team.

Princeton offers 38 varsity sports and nearly 40 club teams, and more than 2,300 students (50% of the undergraduate enrollment) participated in intercollegiate competition (varsity and club combined) during the 2004-05 school year. Nearly 600 teams competed in the intramural sports program.

To accommodate these programs, Princeton has a strong commitment to its facilities. Among these are:

Weaver Track & Field Stadium

The 27,800-seat Princeton Stadium and the adjacent Weaver Track and Field Stadium took the place of Palmer Stadium, which was torn down following the 1996 season.

The track facility features wide lanes and a great radius on the turns. The track's north straightaway has starting chutes at both ends so that sprints and hurdles can be run in either direction, depending on the wind. There is also a steeplechase water jump, a shot put circle, a discus circle, a javelin run and two movable high jumps. There are twin long jump and triple jump runways with sand landing pits on both ends, as well as a pole vault site that has approaches from either side.

The stadium, which has seating for 2,000, frames Freylinghuysen Field, the home of the sprint football team.

Frist Campus Center

The Frist Campus Center is a hub of activity and learning for everyone at Princeton, as can be seen by the collage of pictures on the previous page.

The center provides a variety of programs that complement the academic experience, including late-night activities, film series, lectures, dining, and study opportunities. It also provides convenient services, such as computer clusters, laptop connection ports, ATM machines, vending machines, mail services, a convenience store, a branch of the Princeton U-Store, and a billiards room 20 hours a day (24 during mid-terms and finals).

All classrooms in the center are wired to allow occupants to connect laptop computers to the University network. The center also contains electronic classrooms, a multimedia learning resources lab, seminar

Jadwin Gymnasium

Jadwin Gymnasium, with a capacity of 6,854, is the state's second-largest on-campus basketball arena. A new floor was installed in the summer of 2002. Its main floor also serves as a top indoor track and field facility, as well as a practice facility for many Princeton teams.

The sublevels of Jadwin hold one of the largest fencing rooms in the world, two weight rooms and six tennis courts. A squash facility, with 11 international-size courts as well as spectator seating and a lounge, is on 'D' level. A recent renovation on 'E' level added FieldTurf to a full indoor practice facility for several teams, including football.

Class of 1952 Stadium

Class of 1952 Stadium serves as the home for three national powers, the men's and women's lacrosse teams and the field hockey team. The 4,000-seat facility includes Princeton's first artificial turf field, lighting for night games, a press box, team rooms and rest rooms.

rooms equipped for videotaping instructors, a lecture/demonstration room, a video study facility, and a tutoring room, as well as a variety of small and large meeting rooms, a theater, banquet facilities, lounges, and an outdoor plaza.

The center also houses the International and Women's Centers, the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning, and the new Community Service Center.

The Campus Center was named for the Frist family, including Dr. Thomas F. Frist, Jr., Princeton Parent '91 and '93, and U.S. Senator William H. Frist, Princeton Class of '74.

The Jadwin Jungle is the place to be during hoops season.

Baker Rink

One of the oldest college hockey venues in the country, Baker Rink has housed the Princeton men's hockey program since 1923 and the women's program since its inception in 1979. The arena, named after Tiger football and hockey legend Hobey Baker '14, includes locker rooms, offices and weight training facilities.

Dillon Gymnasium

Dillon has facilities for aerobics, basketball, conditioning and weight training, dance, martial arts, recreational swimming, squash, volleyball and wrestling. In addition, the Stephens Fitness Center in Dillon Gymnasium provides a centralized facility where men and women can pursue many personal health objectives with trained supervision.

Shea Rowing Center

The University recently expanded and renovated its landmark boathouse and crew facilities, now known as the Shea Rowing Center. The crew programs use the University-owned Lake Carnegie and its Olympic racing course.

Other Facilities

Other facilities include Clarke Field, a baseball field with 600 seats; Lourie-Love Field, a lighted facility for soccer matches; 1895 Field, a charming softball field; the Lenz Tennis Center, which features eight new courts in 2004, and DeNunzio Pool.

The two buses sat side-by-side, parked on the apron between Caldwell Field House and DeNunzio Pool, waiting to load two separate groups for the most improbable of journeys as television cameras and newspaper reporters and photographers were there to chronicle the scene.

The date was Dec. 1, 2004, and the Princeton women's soccer team and men's water polo team were preparing to fly off to their respective NCAA Final Fours. Their participation brought to four the number of Princeton teams who would compete in the Final Four of an NCAA tournament in the calendar year 2004, tying UCLA and Stanford for the most in Division I.

The performances of those two teams in the fall were the highlights of the 2004-05 athletic year at Princeton. It was a year that saw Princeton win the Ivy League's unofficial all-sports points championship for the 19th straight time, and Yasser El Halaby's third-straight national squash championship gave Princeton at least one team or individual national title for the 19th straight year as well.

Stretching back 10 years, Princeton has won 110 Ivy League championships, 37 more than the next-highest total by an Ivy school.

Princeton won Ivy League championships in men's and women's golf, women's volleyball, women's soccer and softball. In addition, eight other teams finished in second place, and 24 of the 33 teams in Ivy sports finished in the top half of the league standings.

Princeton's Class of 2005 combined to win 36 Ivy titles, the most in the league, and finished with a four-year total of 20 All-Americans, 10 Ivy Player of the Year Awards and 156 All-Ivy League selections.

Still, it was the remarkable fall runs of the two Final Four years that will be most remembered for the 2004-05 year.

The women's soccer team put together one of the most memorable seasons in all of Princeton athletic history. Competing as one of 306 Division I schools, Princeton went 19-3 overall, including a perfect 7-0-0 in the Ivy League, and then won four NCAA tournament games to become the first Ivy League team to reach the women's soccer Final Four and the first Ivy team in any sport to reach the Final Four of a 64-team NCAA tournament.

Along the way, Princeton produced two first-team All-Americans (Diana Matheson, Esmeralda Negron) and two Academic All-Americans, won the NSCAA team academic award and was led by the Division I Coach of the Year, Julie Shackford. Princeton, who finished the season ranked fourth nationally, set the Ivy League record for wins in a season and goals in a league season. Princeton defeated Central Connecticut and Villanova to reach the Sweet 16 and then defeated Boston College 2-0 to reach the quarterfinals. Playing at home in front of 2,504 chilled fans who jammed into Lourie-Love Field the night after Thanksgiving, Princeton dominated Washington 3-1 to earn a spot in the Final Four at Cary, N.C., where the season would end with a 2-0 loss to UCLA.

The men's water polo team, likewise, found itself matched against UCLA in the Final Four at Stanford. To get there, the Tigers defeated St. Francis 3-2 on Nick Seaver's goal in overtime. Before that, Peter Sabbatini, who would be a second-team All-America goalkeeper, shut out the Terriers for nearly 23 minutes, an eternity by water polo standards.

Like Shackford, Tiger head coach Luis Nicolao was honored as the national water polo Coach of the Year.

The highlight of the winter came in the form of the diminutive yet dominant El Halaby, who continued his brilliant career with another national squash championship. El Halaby, who dominated Yale's Julian Illingworth 9-6, 9-2, 9-1 in the final match, became the first men's player to win the intercollegiate championship each of his first three years. He will enter his senior year with the opportunity to match Princeton women's coach Gail Ramsay as the only players in college squash history to win four individual titles.

Princeton teams won three Ivy championships in the spring, including another sweep of the golf titles. The men's team won its second straight title and fifth in the last six years and did so in record-setting fashion, shooting a combined two-under 862 for the lowest three-round score in the 26-year history of the Ivy League championships. Creighton Page became the 12th Princetonian to win the individual league championship, followed by teammate Jason Gerken in second.

On the women's side, Meg Nakamura, Sharla Cloutier and Avery Kiser went 2-3-4 as Princeton won its second straight title and third in five years.

The softball team returned to Ivy League prominence after a one-year absence, giving Maureen Barron her third championship in four years as Tiger head coach. Princeton, led by Ivy Pitcher of the Year Erin Snyder, won the league by two games over Cornell and won a game in the NCAA regional tournament in Arizona before being eliminated.
